Safety and Sobriety: Best Practices in Domestic Violence and Substance Abuse

Domestic Violence/Substance Abuse Interdisciplinary Task Force of the Illinois Department of Human Services

July 2000
July 14, 2000

Dear Colleague,

The Illinois Department of Human Services is pleased to release Best Practices For Domestic Violence and Substance Abuse Services. This document will serve as an important tool for agencies when serving clients with both issues.

This manual is the result of years of work by the Domestic Violence/Substance Abuse Task Force. The Task Force, a committee of the Department’s Domestic Violence Advisory Council, is a collaborative group linking service providers, administrators and researchers from the fields of domestic violence, substance abuse and criminal justice.

To create success for clients with both domestic violence and substance abuse issues, it is critical to provide comprehensive services which address their multiple needs. This manual outlines procedures that human service professionals can follow when they are facing clients with both domestic violence and substance abuse issues, and provides guidance for forging collaborations between agencies.

On behalf of the Department, I look forward to this manual being utilized by agencies across the state. With continued collaborations, we can help the families of Illinois achieve both sobriety and safety.

Sincerely,

Linda Reneé Baker
Secretary
Domestic Violence/Substance Abuse Interdisciplinary Task Force

Barbara Mills, 1947-1998

This document is dedicated to the memory of Barbara Mills. Barb, who died in 1998 shortly after the task force began its work, was co-chair of the task force, and was instrumental in its conception and development. She was that rare practitioner who had a solid background in both the substance abuse and domestic violence fields. She was Director of Agency Programming for DOVE, Inc., in Decatur, and was a certified alcohol and other drug abuse counselor. At the time of her death she was actively working to get certification for domestic violence counselors and advocates. She was a visionary who is missed by her friends, her community, and all who knew her.

Introduction

Safety and Sobriety: Best Practices in Domestic Violence and Substance Abuse

In December 1997, the Bureau of Domestic Violence Prevention & Intervention of the Illinois Department of Human Services convened an advisory group to discuss the frequently co-occurring problems of domestic violence and substance abuse. The 30 members of the Domestic Violence-Substance Abuse Interdisciplinary Task Force were drawn from the domestic violence and substance abuse practice and policy communities, academia, and government, including the DHS Office of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse.

In conjunction with the Illinois Family Violence Coordinating Council, and with the support of the Illinois Violence Prevention Authority, Illinois Department of Human Services, Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence, Illinois Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse Professional Certification Association, and a number of private sponsors, the first Better Practices in Substance Abuse and Domestic Violence conference convened in Bloomington in May 1998. This conference succeeded beyond anyone’s expectations, drawing nearly 400 participants from across the spectrum of service providers and policy makers in the state. In June 1999, the second Best Practices conference was held in Springfield. The theme of that conference, and the title of this manual – Safety and Sobriety – was drawn from a keynote address by Theresa Zubretsky.

The task force has met for the past two years. While there are few areas where the task force could reach a true consensus, there are some key points about which we do agree:

- Substance abuse problems and domestic violence overlap and they often co-occur. However, substance abuse and domestic violence are different problems, and they require different interventions.

- There are multiple causes for both substance abuse and for domestic violence. There is little evidence that one problem causes the other.

- Active substance abuse by the perpetrator of domestic violence or active substance abuse by the victim of domestic violence threatens the safety of the victim.

- Domestic violence impairs the opportunity for addiction recovery and threatens sobriety.

- Regardless of setting, workers in all fields will be more effective if they consider the perspectives of safety, sobriety, and justice for the people with whom they work.

One of the tasks this group agreed to undertake is development of a best practices document which reflects the state of the art in substance abuse/domestic violence practice. The document is grounded in the 1997 booklet Substance Abuse Treatment and Domestic Violence published by the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment and distributed to participants at the 1998 conference.

The document you are reading was conceptualized as a brief, hands-on, Illinois-specific tool for use by substance abuse professionals, the domestic violence community, and workers in other areas such as criminal justice, child welfare, and public assistance. The core sections of the document target four populations defined by the settings where they would first be encountered: (1) men in batterers’ intervention programs, (2) men in substance abuse treatment programs, (3) women in domestic violence victim programs, and (4) women in substance abuse treatment. The task force believes these four settings — in addition to criminal justice, child protection, and public assistance — are the settings where the confluence between substance abuse and domestic violence can be most effectively addressed. Sections are added to address populations (cultural minorities, gays, and lesbians) and settings (child welfare, public assistance, and criminal justice) that could not be adequately addressed in the main sections.

This is only one of many ways to organize a document such as this, and we make no claim to it being the best way. Each of the four sections is designed for staff working in one of those settings. For example, the section on women in substance abuse programs targets addiction counselors working with women’s treatment programs. The section assumes that addiction counselors do not need education in addictions, but are likely to need information about domestic violence. Specifically, they may need to learn about domestic violence as it affects practice with women currently receiving addiction treatment. The other three sections follow a similar pattern, targeting staff in batterers’ intervention programs, addiction counselors in men’s treatment programs, and domestic violence advocates.

There are a few things the reader should know about this document. First, it is not designed to be read cover-to-cover like a book. We believe the best way to use the document is to select the section best corresponding to the type of setting in which you work, then to read other sections as interest directs. Second, the document was developed by individuals working in a committee. Consequently, it has all the advantages and disadvantages of committee products. On the one hand, it lacks a single voice and may at times appear uneven or disjointed. On the other hand, it reflects a much broader base of opinion than most material you can read in this area. There are parts of the document which contradict other parts of the document. These contradictions reflect the disagreements between knowledgeable practitioners within and between their respective fields. Finally, where research exists to support a perspective, it is reflected in the document. However, there is little actual research to support practice in this area, so we depend heavily on the experience of practitioners to fill the knowledge gaps.

On behalf of the Domestic Violence-Substance Abuse Interdisciplinary Task Force, I welcome readers to join and contribute to the movement to link the domestic violence and substance abuse fields in a way that will enhance the safety and sobriety of the people who look to us for help.

Definitions

What is Domestic Violence?

Domestic violence as defined by the American Psychological Association (APA, 1996) is: “a pattern of abusive behaviors including a wide range of physical, sexual, and psychological maltreatment used by one person in an intimate relationship against another to gain power unfairly or maintain that person’s misuse of power, control and authority.” Domestic violence, simply stated, is an attempt to control the behavior of your partner. Abuse is a misuse of power that uses the bond of intimacy, trust, and dependency to make your partner, man or woman, feel unequal, powerless and unsafe. Domestic violence is a crime under the Illinois Domestic Violence Act (725 ILCS 5/112A-1)(750 ILCS 60/102).

What are Substance Abuse and Addiction?

Substance abuse is a destructive pattern of use of drugs including alcohol, which leads to clinically significant (social, occupational, medical) impairment or distress. Often the substance use continues in spite of significant life problems related to that use. When a person begins to exhibit symptoms of tolerance (the need for significantly larger amounts of the substance to achieve intoxication) and withdrawal (adverse reactions after a reduction of the substance), it is likely that the person has progressed from abuse to dependence, or addiction. Addiction is a primary, chronic disease with genetic, psycho-social, and environmental factors influencing its development and manifestations. The disease is often progressive and fatal. It is characterized by continuous or periodic impaired control over drinking alcohol or using other drugs, preoccupation with drugs or alcohol, use of drugs or alcohol despite adverse consequences, and distortions in thinking, most notably denial. Addiction is a treatable disease and long-term recovery is possible.

Best Practices: Addressing Substance Abuse In Domestic Violence Agencies

Common Perspectives

A significant number of women and children seen in domestic violence agencies suffer from substance abuse problems. A study of Illinois shelters reveals that as many as 42 percent of their clients abuse alcohol or other drugs (Bennett & Lawson, 1994). There are a number of reasons for this:

• Victims may begin or increase their use of alcohol/other drugs in response to domestic violence. Alcohol/other drugs may be used to medicate the physical and emotional pain of domestic violence or to cope with the fears of being battered.

• Alcohol/other drug use may be encouraged or even forced by the partner as a mechanism of control. Efforts at abstinence may be sabotaged.

• Factors related to victimization are low self-esteem, guilt, shame, powerlessness, depression, sexual dysfunction, and relationship dysfunction. All of these provide a foundation for the development of substance abuse.

A victim with a substance abuse problem is at increased risk because:

• Acute and chronic effects of alcohol/other drug use may prevent the victim from assessing the level of danger posed by the batterer.

• Under the influence, victims may feel a sense of increased power. Victims may erroneously believe in their ability to defend themselves against physical assaults, or their power to change the batterer.

• The abuse of alcohol/other drugs impairs judgement and thought processes so that victims may have difficulty with adequate safety planning. Alcohol/other drug use makes it more difficult for victims to leave violent relationships.

• Victims may be reluctant to contact police in violent situations for fear of their own arrest or referral to the Department of Children and Family Services.

• Use of alcohol/other drugs may increase involvement in other illegal activities.

• Victims may be denied access to shelters or other services due to substance abuse.

Response to Substance Abuse

Because there is a significant correlation between victimization and substance abuse, all domestic violence service providers need to address the issue of substance abuse. A formal screening for substance abuse should be included in the intake process. If victims are to remain free of violence, they should understand the impact substance abuse has on their safety.

Substance Abuse Screening

A substance abuse screening is an opportunity to begin discussing how substance abuse impacts safety. It is a preliminary step that determines the likelihood that an alcohol or drug problem exists. Screening for substance abuse involves honest talk with individuals about their alcohol and drug use, observing their behavior, and looking for signs of use. A screening differs from an assessment. An assessment uses diagnostic instruments and processes to determine if the person is abusing, or is dependent on, alcohol or drugs. When screening for substance abuse, be sure to:

- Ensure privacy. The first step in screening is to insure that it occurs in private. Children should not be present because they may repeat what they hear.

- Communicate respect and trust. It is important to establish a respectful and trusting relationship. Assure victims that, except for safety concerns, anything discussed will be held in strictest confidence and will not jeopardize their ability to receive appropriate services.

- Observe behavior. Look for signs of alcohol or drug use.

- Ask questions. There are several recognized screening tools for alcohol or drug use included in the Appendix.

- Deal with denial. Denial is the most frequent response to questions about alcohol/other drug use. This is especially true for women not only because they are ashamed of their behavior, but also because they fear losing their children. When talking with a victim about alcohol/other drug use, ask open-ended questions. A victim may also find it easier to talk about their partner’s use rather than their own. If this is the case, follow up with questions about the victim’s use.

Intervention

What should come first: domestic violence counseling or substance abuse treatment? It is not a question of either safety or sobriety first, but rather safety and sobriety, since one is less likely without the other. The presence or threat of abuse often interferes with a victim’s ability to achieve abstinence. Continued use of substances interferes with safety. If screening leads you to suspect that a person has an alcohol or drug problem, refer or arrange for an on-site assessment.

Linking persons to substance abuse programs requires the domestic violence staff to:

- Be informed about treatment options/providers available in their community.

- Do cross-training with substance abuse programs to increase the awareness of both issues.

- Continue open dialogue and collaboration between agencies.

- Be willing to provide service options for victims who are substance dependent, whether they are in treatment or not. Ideally, victims should be referred to a treatment provider sensitive to the issues of domestic violence. If the batterer is in treatment, avoid referring the victim to the same program. In rural areas, this may not be feasible, and advocates will have to be sure that the substance abuse provider understands that violence is an issue. (See section on confidentiality in the Appendix.)

Referral

- When referring an individual to a treatment provider for an assessment, the first concern should be safety. Will an assessment interview place the client or children at risk for further harm? What strategies can be employed to ensure safety?

- What assurance does the person need to follow through with the referral? Victims who have suffered from physical and/or sexual abuse and intimidation may be traumatized by the prospect of talking with a stranger about their use of illegal drugs or fear a drug test. What concerns does the person have about substance abuse treatment and how can they be addressed?

- What information does the person need to follow through with the referral? If the individual is referred to an off-site location, be sure the person understands where to go, who they will see, and how to get there.

- Another concern is what support the individual needs to keep the appointment. Is transportation or child care needed? Are there other barriers? The referral process necessitates developing a good working relationship with a treatment agency to jointly address the individual’s needs.

- Victims of domestic violence should not be referred to programs that require conjoint counseling as part of substance abuse treatment.

- Many treatment providers do outreach; that is, they will attempt to visit the person at their home to engage them in treatment. If outreach will place the person or treatment provider staff at risk, it is important to convey that information to the provider.

Substance Abuse Assessment

When a person is referred to a substance abuse treatment provider, a counselor will use assessment techniques to characterize the problem and to develop a treatment plan. The Illinois Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse Professional Certification Association (IAODAPCA) evaluates counselor competency and grants recognition to those counselors who meet specified minimum standards. All treatment programs licensed by the Department of Human Services must have credentialed staff. The system identifies the functions, responsibilities, knowledge, and skill bases required by counselors in the performance of their jobs.

Assessment involves five important tasks:

- Aid in diagnosis of the problem.
- Establish the severity of the problem.
- Develop a treatment plan.
- Define a baseline which can be used to evaluate an individual’s progress in treatment.
- Increase the individual’s motivation to attend treatment.

A variety of methods may be used in assessing the individual, including medical examinations, clinical interviews, and formal instruments such as questionnaires. During an assessment, information is gathered to determine which aspects of the individual’s life are affected by alcohol/other drug use.
Areas of assessment include alcohol and drug use, social and family relationships, psychological functioning, legal status, medical conditions, and employment and educational status. The goal is to determine if treatment is needed, and if so, the appropriate level of care. If the individual is given a DSM IV (or ICD-9) diagnosis, treatment is generally recommended.

In some settings, urine tests may be required.
For domestic violence victims who have been sexually abused, the prospect of a urine drug test may be especially threatening.
Drug tests are most commonly done to monitor treatment compliance rather than as part of the assessment.

Treatment

While abstinence may be a long-term goal for addiction programs, the immediate goals are to reduce use, improve the person’s ability to function and minimize the effects of abuse on health and social functioning.
Matching the person with the appropriate level of care ensures that the person receives the type of treatment corresponding to the person’s use and their current level of functioning. Licensed treatment agencies in Illinois use ASAM (American Society of Addiction

Medicine) criteria to determine which treatment options and level of intensity are appropriate. In developing a treatment plan,
the counselor evaluates:

• The person’s level of intoxication, withdrawal potential and need for medication.
• The person’s physical health.
• The person’s emotional health and functioning.
• The person’s acceptance or resistance to
treatment.
• The potential for relapse and the recovery environment.

Treatment options vary and may include behavioral therapies such as counseling, psychotherapy, support groups or family therapy. Sometimes medications are given to suppress the withdrawal syndrome and drug craving or to block the effects of drugs.
Treatment may include:

• Outpatient services (Level I).
• Intensive outpatient services, a structured program offered a minimum of 9 hours per week (Level II).
• Residential detoxification services (Level III.2).
• Residential rehabilitation (Level III.5).
• After-care programs.
• Referral to support groups such as Women for Sobriety, Alcoholics
  Anonymous, or Narcotics Anonymous.

Confidentiality

Unique confidentiality laws apply to almost all substance abuse treatment programs. The law prohibits the disclosure of any information that would identify a person as having been referred for, or having received treatment for, an alcohol or drug problem without the person’s written consent. There are exceptions for mandated reports of child abuse, in certain medical emergencies or for court orders. A court may authorize a treatment program to disclose confidential patient information following a hearing at which good cause has been established and at which the patient and the treatment program have been represented. A subpoena, search warrant, or arrest warrant, even when it is signed by a judge, is not sufficient, by itself, to require or permit a program to release patient information.

Information protected by federal confidentiality laws may be disclosed if the client has signed a proper consent form. To be valid, the consent must be in writing and must specify:

- The client’s name.
- The name of the program making the disclosure.
- The purpose of the disclosure.
- The name of the person/program that will receive the information.
- How much and what kind of information will be disclosed.
- A statement that the client may revoke the consent at any time, except to the extent that the program has already acted on it.
- The date, event or condition on which the consent expires.
- The signature of the client and the date of the signature.

Federal regulations also prohibit redisclosure of information; therefore, a domestic violence program may not disclose information received from a treatment agency without the person’s consent. Federal regulations allow substance abuse treatment programs to disclose information to outside agencies that provide services to the treatment program — for example, laboratories, accountants or other professional services. When communication needs to take place on a regular basis, the treatment program enters into a qualified service agreement. The agreement specifies that the person or agency providing the service will abide by the federal confidentiality law. (See the Appendix for a more detailed discussion of confidentiality requirements.) A program should always consult its own attorney regarding the possible use of such an agreement.

Supporting Sobriety

Domestic violence agencies can support victims struggling with the issues of substance abuse in the following ways:

- Assist staff in dealing with their own beliefs, feelings, and prejudices about substance abuse. Provide ongoing training to enable staff to recognize the characteristics of substance abuse and to make appropriate referrals.
- Minimize blame and moral reprobation for use or relapse, which may further disempower the victim and empower the batterer.
- Inform/advise the victim and treatment provider of the risks of conjoint couples counseling sessions.
- While providing advocacy-based counseling for substance-abusing victims, help them recognize the role substance abuse plays. It can keep them tied to the abusive relationship, increase their risk of harm and impair their safety planning ability.
- Assist victims by helping them find an alternate means of empowerment as replacement for the sense of power induced by substances.
- Include plans for continued sobriety as part of the safety plan. Help the victim understand the ways the batterer may attempt to undermine sobriety before the victim exits the shelter or completes advocacy-based services.
- Encourage and facilitate linkage with substance abuse treatment resources and abstinence-based support groups.
• Remain cognizant of which local substance abuse programs and support groups provide the highest degree of physical and psychological safety for victims.
Best Practices: Addressing Domestic Violence In Substance Abuse Treatment for Women

Common Perspectives

The importance of addressing domestic violence in substance abuse treatment for women becomes evident when one sees the research. Women who abuse substances are more likely to experience domestic violence in relationships (Miller, Downs, & Gondoli, 1989). Women who experience domestic violence are more likely to misuse prescription drugs as well as alcohol (Stark & Flitcraft, 1988). One study found that of women in a drug treatment center, 90 percent had been physically assaulted and 95 percent had been raped (Stevens & Arbiter, 1995).

Substance-abusing women and women who have experienced domestic violence report similar experiences. Both may demonstrate:

- Isolation, shame, and guilt.
- Behaviors that others describe as bizarre or dysfunctional.
- Traumatization.
- Initial denial of the problem.
- Loss of support systems and fear of losing children as a result of admitting their problem.
- Low ego strengths.
- Magical thinking (a client’s belief that the problem will simply go away as if by magic).
- Impairment of their ability to make logical decisions.
- Involvement in the criminal justice system, either as a victim or offender.
- Often seeking services only when in crisis.
- Several returns to the substance, or to a relationship where battering continues, before making a lasting change.

Interview Tips

All women in substance abuse treatment should be screened for domestic violence. When interviewing a client:

- Use caution and tact. Don’t initially refer to the partner’s behavior as domestic violence. Instead use language such as inappropriate behavior, unhealthy behavior, behavior that is unsafe, and possibly abuse.
- A woman might not feel safe disclosing information to you. She may disclose more about herself when she gains confidence and begins to trust you.
- Proceed sequentially from the least sensitive to the most sensitive topics. Use the early (least sensitive) part of the interview for relationship-building and the establishment of trust.
- Be careful about criticizing the partner. Battered women may care for their partners and may become defensive or shut down if the partner is criticized.
- Avoid labelling survival strategies or other behaviors as co-dependent.
- Get factual information. Often a woman will give vague answers to questions. Ask her to clarify her responses. For example, ask her to talk more about her experiences in relationships.

Domestic Violence Screening

There are formal domestic violence screening tools in the Appendix of this document. Key questions which might lead to a formal screening include:

- What happens when you argue with your partner?
- How safe do you feel with your partner?
- How safe do you feel when you leave here?
- Can you tell me about a situation with your partner when yelling and screaming occurred?
- Can you tell me about a situation with your partner when things were destroyed?
- Can you tell me about a situation when your partner pushed, slapped, or hit you?
- How does your partner show respect to you?
- How does your partner attempt to control your alcohol or other drug use?
- Have your efforts to get clean and sober been sabotaged by your partner?

In addition to formal screening, counselors may notice:

- Bruises or other untreated physical injuries.
- Inconsistencies or evasiveness.
- Frequently missed appointments or partner waiting for her during counseling sessions.
- Reports that partner isolates her, prevents her from attending counseling or support groups, threatens her, or forces her to do things she does not want to do.
- Evidence or reports of child abuse.
- Reports of jealousy or statements beginning with “my partner won’t let me.”

Referral

If the screening indicates a probability of violence, refer the woman either to a shelter or to a provider who deals with domestic violence issues. (A list of domestic violence service providers is included in the Appendix.)

It is important to coordinate services as much as possible with the domestic violence advocate. Coordinate discharge planning, especially when discharging from a residential program. This coordination allows the woman to identify several options, such as staying at a shelter or staying with family or friends if it is unsafe to go home. Explain confidentiality regulations to domestic violence advocates when coordinating services, as well as the meaning of American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM) criteria. When serving a mutual client, it is also helpful for domestic violence and substance abuse service providers to present a united effort when advocating with other systems (e.g., Department of Children and Family Services).

Intervention

As substance abuse professionals know, women often have treatment issues that are different from men’s. When domestic violence is added, this difference is magnified.

Safety issues can seriously affect the woman’s ability to maintain sobriety. Make safety as well as sobriety a top priority. Treatment should focus on both issues. Develop relapse prevention plans that include safety planning and ways to cope if her partner gets violent.

When a woman is harmed, she may be more likely to use substances to cope. She may use alcohol or drugs to medicate physical and/or emotional pain. She may even be coerced into use by her partner — the abuser will often do whatever it takes to keep the woman under his control, including forcing use of substances and threatening her if she does not continue to use. Often her partner is using as well, and if she leaves to find a more sober support network, there is increased risk to her safety.

Recognize that even though her relationship may be a trigger for continued use, it may also be unsafe for her to leave. Victims of domestic violence aren’t so much choosing to stay in violent relationships as they are choosing when it is safe for them (and their children) to leave. For many victims, this may be never.

Discuss these issues in terms of the dilemmas they create. When addressing issues of noncompliance, counselors should take into account the batterer’s ability to sabotage substance abuse treatment through threats or fear.

Couple or family counseling can be very dangerous for victims of domestic violence. DO NOT provide information to the partner. If the perpetrator finds out about disclosure of the violence or of substance use, the woman may be punished.

Domestic violence is not caused by substance abuse and is not merely a symptom of substance abuse. Domestic violence is an issue of power and control, however often people identify anger as a symptom. Battered women often blame themselves for the beatings they have suffered. Victims often believe they are being abused because of their substance use and some substance abuse counselors believe this as well. Therefore, it is important to stress that abuse is not the victim’s fault. Counselors may need to address domestic violence and substance abuse with different interventions.

Confrontational techniques are often not effective with victims of domestic abuse. They can be interpreted by the woman as an extension of how the abuser treats her. Also, avoid language that implies there is something wrong with the victim or that she caused her own abuse. Some examples of words to avoid with these women are codependency, enabling, and powerlessness. It is important to avoid codependency and enabling because these concepts do not hold the batterer fully accountable for his behavior. In the domestic violence community, codependency is a term for a woman’s adherence to the socially sanctioned roles of women, and is always inappropriate when applied to domestic violence victims.

Some 12 Step groups’ concepts can pose problems for women. These include submission to a higher power referred to exclusively in male terms, emphasis on “character defects,” limited emphasis on strengths, and discouragement from talking about the abuse that has happened to them.

Whenever possible, domestic violence victims should be referred to gender-specific treatment and support groups. Mixed groups may involve descriptions of male aggression directed toward female partners.

Victims respond best to gender-specific empowerment and self-discovery. They often desire and benefit from all-female support groups. They often feel there are not many options. Language focusing on empowerment may help her develop the tools to stay safe and sober. Emphasize strengths and healthy decision-making.
Best Practices: Addressing Substance Abuse
In Batterers’ Programs

Overview

The incidence of substance abuse among men in batterers’ programs is between 50 percent and 100 percent, depending on the proportion of the men who were referred by the criminal justice system (Bennett, 1995). Batterers referred through the courts are more likely to also be substance abusers than self-referred men. Men who are violent outside their families are more likely to have substance abuse problems than men who are violent only within their families. Alcohol or drug abuse does not cause the abusive behavior. However, for most batterers, alcohol and drug use may:

- Increase the risk that he will misinterpret his partner’s behavior.
- Increase his belief that violent behavior is due to alcohol or drugs.
- Make him think less clearly about the repercussions of his actions.
- Reduce his ability to tell when a victim is injured.
- Reduce the chance that he will benefit from punishment, education, or treatment.

Victim safety

The most essential consideration is the safety of domestic violence victims. The interventions must account for the safety of victims whether they are in domestic violence programs or in substance abuse treatment.

Batterer screening

Because so many batterers are also substance abusers, all batterers should be thoroughly screened for substance abuse problems. A screening for substance abuse is a preliminary step that determines the probability of an alcohol or drug problem. Batterers’ intervention programs screen for substance abuse through:
• Initial interviews. Program staff should ask established questions and be trained to interpret responses. Direct questioning about alcohol and drug use often makes substance abusers deny the importance or effect of alcohol or drugs in their lives. (Examples of screening questions and formal screening tools are in the Appendix.)

• Observations of behavior and interactions during the batterers’ program. Lateness, fatigue, aggression, or the smell of alcohol point toward the need for formal alcohol and other drug assessment. Look for signs of alcohol or drug use. (See box.) Interactions with recovering alcoholics and addicts in the batterers’ program are usually revealing, because recovering men can often identify substance abuse patterns in others. Exposure of batterers who are substance abusers to recovering alcoholics and addicts is one of the more compelling reasons for not excluding active substance abusers from batterers’ programs.

• Existing records. The contract signed between the batterer and the program should include access to criminal justice, mental health, and medical records.

Signs of Alcohol or Drug Use

- Smell of alcohol
- Signs of IV drug use (tracks)
- Unusual or extreme behavior
  - Nodding off
  - Overly alert
- Slurred or rapid speech
- Staggering
- Tremors
- Glassy-eyed/pupils dilated or constricted
- Unable to sit still
- Disoriented or confused for no apparent reason
- Argumentative, defensive, or angry at questions about substance use

Refer for assessment. If screening reveals the possibility of substance abuse, the batterer should be referred for formal assessment (unless the evaluator has appropriate training and certification). Formal assessment of substance abuse problems should be conducted by specialists qualified by the Illinois Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse Professional Certification Association. If a probation officer is not actively involved in monitoring the batterer’s progress, the batterers’ program should assume the role of case manager during substance abuse assessment. The batterers’ program should not regard the referral for assessment as a referral to another agency that will then assume responsibility for the case, since this has led to batterers “slipping between the cracks.”

Evaluate abstinent batterers. Abstinent and recovering alcoholics and addicts will usually score positive on the Short Michigan Alcoholism Screening Test (SMAST), CAGE-D, and other screening tools. (Examples of such screening tools are in the Appendix of this document.) Abstinent batterers with no observable supports for staying sober should be considered at high risk for relapse, and consequently, a safety risk.

Case manage active substance abusing batterers who accept alcohol and other drug intervention. Men who are assessed as abusing, or dependent on, alcohol or other drugs require integrated or parallel substance abuse and domestic violence programming. In cases where addiction impairs the man’s ability to utilize the batterers’ program, the batterer/addict may complete an initial phase of addiction treatment such as medical detoxification and engagement with a support program. He then continues in counseling and/or a support program while in the batterers’ program. The batterers’ program should receive regular reports from the substance abuse program about the man’s progress in substance abuse treatment. This will require a Qualified Service Organization Agreement (see Appendix) or a two-way consent. Similarly, the batterers’ program should also release to the substance abuse program (with the signed consent of the batterer) regular reports of attendance, participation, and compliance in the batterers’ program.

Intervene with active substance abusing batterers who refuse alcohol and other drug intervention. When a batterer is also a substance abuser but does not understand or accept the situation, he should still be admitted into a batterers’ program. He can then be referred to substance abuse treatment.

• Under the conditions of a court mandate, programs should communicate to probation officers or case managers that a man requires substance abuse treatment.

• The current or former partners of voluntary or non-court-referred batterers should be notified of his refusal to enter substance abuse treatment, along with the risk that such a refusal represents.

• Acceptance of an addiction treatment referral (including support group attendance) should be made a priority goal of the intervention program.

Integrate substance abuse and batterers’ programs with caution. An integrated program provides domestic violence and substance abuse services under the same program, with differing degrees of integration. Integrated programs under substance abuse programs should actively utilize domestic violence programs as consultants and pay them for their services. They should also actively participate in the community’s coordinated domestic violence council. Integrated programs under domestic violence agencies should actively utilize addiction program staff as consultants and pay them for their services. Sharing certain staff members across agencies may be an alternative to an integrated program. Programs that are not integrated (i.e., batterers’ program and substance abuse program are in different settings) must utilize networking, case management, joint staffing, or some other means of ensuring continuity.
Safety and sobriety are interconnected. Lack of sobriety, either in victims or in batterers, increases the risk for further violence against victims. Lack of victim safety threatens the sobriety of both victim and batterer. However, abstinence and sobriety are not sufficient conditions for safety.
Best Practices: Addressing Domestic Violence
In Substance Abuse Treatment for Men

Approximately half the men who batter their female partners have substance abuse problems. In one large treatment center in Chicago, which has been doing screening since 1997, a consistent pattern has emerged: 70 percent of funded clients (mostly indigent or below federal poverty-level incomes) and 92 percent of nonfunded male clients (mostly court-mandated for DUI or other non-domestic violence offenses) have used some level of violence in a primary relationship within the year prior to assessment (Haymarket Center, 1998). Counselors in addiction treatment programs for men may underestimate the number of men in their programs who use violence (Bennett & Lawson, 1994). Furthermore, the non-substance abusing female partner is often blamed for the actions of the substance abusing batterer. This practice includes labelling the woman as co-dependent or an enabler.

Domestic violence, like many other life problems which affect chemically dependent persons, has traditionally been viewed within the substance abuse treatment field as a manifestation of the dysfunction resulting from long-term use of psychoactive chemicals including alcohol. Until recently most counselors may have expected that abstinence alone would reduce the incidence of violence, and that sobriety (understood as an ongoing connection to community support in addition to abstinence) would eliminate it. In discussions with counselors who are involved in providing intervention services to men receiving alcohol and other drug addiction (substance abuse) treatment, the task force has been reminded of the importance of making treatment providers aware of the experience of women who are victims of domestic violence.

Violence does not always stop or even diminish when the batterer becomes abstinent, and when it does, an increase in other abusive and controlling behavior often replaces it.

Tips for Safety and Sobriety

Screen substance abuse clients for domestic violence. Make it clear that all program participants are screened for violence. It is important for victim safety that the man not believe the evaluator has been “tipped off” by his partner. (See Appendix for examples of screening and assessment tools.) If you identify a man as having used violence, do the following:

- Refer him to a batterers’ intervention program as soon as possible.
• If you are doing his treatment plan, address violence in Dimensions 3, 5, and 6 (Emotional/Behavioral Issues, Relapse Potential, and Recovery Environment) of the American Society of Addiction Medicine’s (ASAM) Client Placement Criteria.

• Use separate facilities to provide services to the batterer and his female victim if at all possible — unless staff and clients in men’s and women’s programs are distinctly separate. If this is not possible, at least schedule appointments at times when the perpetrator and victim are not likely to be in the facility at the same time or on the same day.

• If the client is under court supervision, contact his probation officer to request that batterers’ intervention programming be added as a condition of probation.

• Recognize that violence does not always stop or even diminish when the batterer becomes abstinent, and when it does, an increase in other abusive and controlling behavior often replaces it.

• Do not provide him with family sessions or conjoint therapy. The Illinois Protocol for Partner Abuse Intervention Programs recommends the following criteria for conjoint intervention with batterers and victims:

  (a) The participant has been violence-free for six months.

  (b) A determination by the participant’s counselor and abused women’s advocates that it is appropriate — not automatic at a set time.

  (c) An affirmative desire by the victim, which must include provision for safety at the facility.

  (d) Separate screening of participant and victim.

  (e) A determination that the victim does not hold herself responsible for the abuse, and that she is aware of resources and knows how to use them.

  (f) An affirmative statement from the participant that he accepts full responsibility for his actions.

  (g) The joint arrangement must be able to be terminated at any time in the process. The person providing intervention must terminate any time it is determined to be unsafe to continue.

  (h) Victims must never be required to go for counseling as a condition of services for the participant. Services for men who abuse must never be contingent
In addition, talk with local courts and police regarding appropriate mandated sanctions for substance abuse clients who are found to be batterers. When courts mandate services, it empowers agencies to include batterer intervention as part of their treatment recommendations, even when the offense is not related to domestic violence (e.g., when a client is mandated to treatment for substance abuse after a DUI conviction).

Raising Awareness on Domestic Violence

Assess your own agency’s tolerance toward the equality of women:

- Are women included in the decision-making processes of your agency?
- What are your agency’s recruitment and promotion policies?
- Is there an equal partnership between male and female group co-facilitators?
- Is your agency actively involved in community networks that confront violence against women?
- Do staff exhibit supportive attitudes and beliefs about women and domestic violence?

Talk with local domestic violence service providers to get linkages going which include cross-training of staff. This will increase awareness of the issues on both sides and help in providing services across both agencies.

Screening and Referral

The incidence of family violence perpetrated by substance abusing men is sufficiently high that universal screening is necessary and should become not only the norm but should be seen as an essential part of the screening and assessment.

- Screening tools (see Appendix for examples) should be implemented in consultation with domestic violence professionals.
- These tools should include a clear explanation of what constitutes abuse, rather than just asking a general question about violence or abuse.

⇒ If you do not have on-site batterer intervention services, you will need to establish a relationship with local batterers’ intervention services.

⇒ Make a Mutual Service Agreement or another linkage agreement (see Appendix for example) which establishes regular communication between substance abuse treatment providers and local domestic violence programs. Linkage agreements should not be considered a substitute for regular direct communication between such programs.

Timing of Batterer Intervention

Some substance abuse counselors want to wait 90 days or longer to put clients in batterers’ intervention services. However, violence is a powerful relapse trigger which can sabotage recovery in its earliest stages. For this reason, many service providers recommend beginning batterer services well before a client is discharged from primary substance abuse treatment. Remember: Sobriety without accountability is unlikely.

There are other concerns regarding partner abuse intervention during treatment and early recovery. Some of them are:

- Clients may be very resistant to the whole concept of treatment, and may not react well to the traditionally confrontational format of batterers’ intervention.

- Clients are likely to be suffering neurological complications of long-term use of psychoactive chemicals, which may have an impact on their ability to function in a highly confrontational group.

- Clients may have significant cognitive and educational deficits. These can have an impact on their ability to take responsibility for their violence, as well as on the ability of the program to screen for problems that might suggest that a client is inappropriate for partner abuse intervention.

- Denial is an active dynamic in both substance abuse and domestic violence.

Clients must be individually assessed to determine readiness for partner abuse intervention groups. Carelessness in this area can easily foster bad outcomes by needlessly increasing client resistance and noncompliance.

Batterer Intervention and Relapse Prevention

Clients will respond better if the batterers’ intervention is tied to the idea of relapse prevention. The process of relapse tends to be cyclical. The phases of the cycle may be related to the phases of the cycle of violence. Compare the two, and ask clients to identify experiences where an event in one cycle triggered an event in the other cycle for them. Stress to clients that violence-free life and sobriety are linked in a number of ways:
• In the Twelve Steps of Alcoholics/Narcotics/Cocaine Anonymous, inventory steps require admitting “to God, to ourselves and to another human being the exact nature of our wrongs.” The “amend” steps require making a “list of persons we have harmed,” and becoming “ready to make direct amends to them all.” Accountability and responsibility can be framed in terms of these concepts.

• The A-B-C cognitive-behavioral approach of Rational Recovery and Rational Emotive Therapy asks clients to identify a relationship between their thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. Belief systems which exaggerate male privilege and demean women can be challenged in this context.

• Most religious traditions embrace some version of the Golden Rule: “Do unto others as you would have others do unto you.” Stress the link between personal spirituality and relationships in ways which support equality and mutuality. Contrast concepts such as serenity and centeredness with violence, abuse, and chaotic family life. Relate surrender to giving up control of others’ lives.

• Use tools such as the Cycle of Violence illustration and the Power and Control Wheel as concepts in treatment and relapse prevention.

Confidentiality and Other Legal Issues

Federal laws governing the confidentiality of client records and client-identifying information apply to alcohol and drug abuse treatment providers (see 42 CFR Part 2, and the similar Illinois rule in 77 Ill. Adm. Code 2060.319). Under these laws and the regulations implementing them, no client-identifying information can be disclosed without the client’s written consent in a specific form. Exceptions are:

- Mandated reports of child abuse.
- Emergency medical care.
- Orders of a court of competent jurisdiction following a hearing in camera (in the judge’s chambers) at which good cause has been established (and at which the client and the agency should be represented).
- Suicidal and homicidal threats.

See the relevant portion of the federal and state rule for specific language regarding the exceptions.

Potential problem areas include:

• Caller ID and Star 69. If your agency cannot place a total block on these services, you should block each call with *(Star) 67. If this is not possible, anonymous calls will have to be placed from phones which cannot be traced to the agency.

- Safety checks with partners. Agencies must carefully limit the amount of information they convey, even with consent, to that which is necessary to assure partner safety.

→ Tarasoff situation (e.g., where consent has been revoked by a client who leaves an intervention group prior to completion). Safety checks to partners must, again, be as limited as possible while assuring the goal of partner safety. If consent has been effectively revoked, contact must be made anonymously or only in the name of the victim-service program. (“We have information which leads us to believe that you may be in danger from your partner.”)

→ Contracted providers of batterers’ services. Using their own agency’s identity rather than the substance abuse treatment provider’s identity may avoid the problems specific to the substance abuse-related federal confidentiality regulations.

→ Programs in hospitals or other institutions which are not primarily alcohol and drug abuse treatment providers. Using the name of the larger institution rather than the specific name of the substance abuse treatment program is also an option for exercising duty to warn.

Qualified Service Organization Agreements

Qualified Service Organization Agreements (see Appendix for example) may be useful in communicating with a domestic violence program in some instances. In such an agreement, each agency states its understanding of and commitment to the protection of client information contained in the federal regulations and agrees to share such information as is necessary for the provision of the services in question. When such an agreement has been appropriately entered into, the program may share information with the Qualified Service Organization (QSO) as long as it pertains to the service which the QSO is providing. Further, the agency is not required to notify clients of the existence of the QSO Agreement. This may be a useful tool for agreements with victims’ services organizations regarding safety checks. Note that in ordinary situations, this is not intended to replace consents, and that the QSO should not receive any more information than is necessary for it to perform the service which it has agreed to provide to the substance abuse treatment agency. The QSO is of course prohibited from redisclosing any information it does get unless it obtains a consent to do so from the client in question.

Reverse Confidentiality
Full disclosure and discussion of treatment planning and ancillary services is the rule in substance abuse programs and reflects the need for transparency and genuineness in the therapeutic relationship. However, as a component of safety checks, programs may obtain reports from partners of men in treatment who are also receiving intervention services, and this information must remain confidential if the partner requests confidentiality. Substance abuse providers need to be scrupulous about informing clients who are receiving batterers’ intervention services of the fact that such reports will be accepted and will be kept in confidence if the victim requests it.
The issues of substance abuse and domestic violence have important implications for welfare clients. On August 22, 1996, President Clinton signed the Personal Responsibility and Work Reconciliation Act ending open-ended entitlement for needy families. Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) was replaced by Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). The legislation creating TANF shifted welfare policy from economic security to stressing work and self-sufficiency. It establishes time limits and work requirements, and emphasizes personal responsibility.

Prevalence of Substance Abuse and Domestic Violence

There is a wide range of estimates of the prevalence of substance abuse and domestic violence among TANF families. Many studies lack common definitions, resulting in a wide range of estimates:

- Prevalence rates for substance abuse vary from 6.6 percent to 37 percent of the caseload (Olson & Pavetti, 1996). The general consensus is that 25 percent of TANF clients have substance abuse problems that are likely to interfere with their ability to get and keep a job (Young & Gardner, 1998).

- As more TANF clients go to work and leave the caseload, the percentage of TANF clients with substance abuse problems will likely increase. A study of 25 state programs by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services found substance abuse to be among the most frequently identified functional impairments preventing clients from leaving welfare (U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 1992).

- The estimates of women TANF recipients who experience domestic violence range from 20 percent to 80 percent. However, welfare reform demonstration projects from several states reveal lower rates of domestic violence than these estimates. In Illinois, less than 1 percent of the 57,985 clients screened as part of an employability review self-reported domestic violence (Illinois Department of Human Services, 1998). The disparity between the estimates and actual reports may be attributed to several factors. It may reflect a woman’s reluctance to acknowledge that she is living with a man who may or may not be the father of her children. She may be reluctant to disclose for fear that financial and food stamp benefits will be reduced. She may also fear that disclosure may trigger child welfare involvement.

Implications for TANF Families

Time Limits

The focus of TANF is on transitional services. Federal law limits cash benefits to a maximum of five years in a lifetime. The law allows states to set limits at less than five years and to exempt 20 percent of the caseload from time limits. Illinois has established two time limits for TANF families:

- The time limit for all families is 60 months. Assistance received in other states or in nonconsecutive months counts toward the time limit.

- However, families whose youngest child is age 13 or older are assigned to the Targeted Work Initiative and are limited to 24 months of cash assistance unless the adult is working. Adults who cannot find a job are given the opportunity to earn a TANF payment in a pay-after-performance program (Work First).

In Illinois, time limits began on July 1, 1997, with the implementation of TANF. Assistance received prior to this date does not count toward the time limits. Benefits paid under the following circumstances will come from state funds and will not count toward the time limits:

- Payments made to single-parent households when the adult is working 30 hours per week in a paid job.

- Payments made to families headed by a teen parent.

- Payments made to two-parent households if the adults are working a total of 35 hours per week.

- Payments made to single-parent households when the adult is attending an accredited post-secondary education program full time. The adult must maintain a cumulative 2.5 grade point average.

Work Requirements

Welfare reform places a greater emphasis on engaging TANF clients in work as quickly as possible.

- TANF requires most clients to work or participate in work-related activities.

- After 24 months of TANF, the adult must have a job or be taking part in work activities for the family to continue to receive cash assistance.

- The hours spent in substance abuse treatment and domestic violence counseling count toward meeting the work requirement.

Personal Responsibility

The TANF law stresses personal responsibility.

- Clients convicted of a felony crime after August 21, 1996, that involves possession, use, or distribution of a controlled substance are not eligible for cash assistance.

- Clients who are convicted of any other drug-related felony and don’t enter treatment or an aftercare program will remain ineligible for two years.

- Clients who have additional children once they start receiving TANF benefits do not receive an increase in cash benefits.

- Clients must cooperate in establishing paternity and obtaining child support. A woman may receive an exemption from establishing paternity or obtaining child support if doing so will place her or her children at risk of harm.

- Clients must meet child support requirements, cooperate in work and training activities, cooperate in referral and treatment for substance abuse, and follow through on their service plan or face sanctions.

- Sanctions are imposed at three levels:
1. At the first level, the cash benefit is reduced by 50 percent. Benefits are restored as soon as the client cooperates.

2. At the second level, the cash benefit is reduced by 50 percent for three months. If by the fourth month the client has not cooperated, the entire cash benefit is stopped.

3. At the third level, the entire cash benefit is stopped for three months. The client must cooperate for benefits to be restored.

Need for Collaboration

Helping families struggling with poverty and domestic violence and/or substance abuse requires the coordinated efforts of TANF, domestic violence and substance abuse treatment agencies.

- The imposition of time limits on welfare receipt necessitates that service/treatment plans incorporate the goal of employment.

- The reality of sanctions necessitates that DHS offices are informed of any circumstance that would keep a client from complying with a program requirement. Agencies need to communicate and work together to develop coordinated, rather than conflicting, service plans.

- The complexity of multiple problems often requires joint intervention. TANF policy requiring cooperation with a substance abuse treatment plan may be used to motivate a client. Supportive services such as child care and transportation are available to assist TANF clients with their service plan.
Special Settings: The Criminal Justice System

Common Perspectives

Although this best practice manual is targeted to direct service providers working in the substance abuse and/or domestic violence field, the collective authors of this manual concluded that the large number of domestic violence perpetrators involved in the criminal justice system necessitated the development of a separate chapter. This chapter is not sufficiently comprehensive to delineate all of the “best practices” within the intricacies of the criminal justice system; rather, it is intended to raise the general awareness of the system in its response to and treatment of the dual issues of domestic violence and substance abuse, and to encourage the system to undertake a more holistic approach to these dual issues.

A survey conducted by the American Correctional Association in 1990 found that more than half of female inmates report being victims of physical abuse and 36 percent report being victims of sexual abuse (that often occurred when they were adolescents or children).

The Illinois compiled statutes (ILCS), Chapter 750, defines domestic violence/abuse as “physical abuse, harassment, intimidation of a dependent, interference with personal liberty or willful deprivation,” but does not include reasonable direction of a minor child by a parent or person in loco parentis. It also defines “family or household member” as inclusive of spouses, former spouses, parents, children, stepchildren and other persons related by blood or by present or prior marriage, persons who share or formerly shared a common dwelling, persons who have or allegedly have a child in common, persons who share or allegedly share a blood relationship through a child, persons who have or had a dating or engagement relationship, and persons with disabilities and their personal assistants.

Relationship Between Substance Use and the Crime of Domestic Violence

A National Institute of Justice study (1997), Drugs, Alcohol, and Domestic Violence in Memphis, indicates the following:

• 92 percent of domestic violence assailants had used drugs or alcohol during the day of the assault.
• 67 percent had used a combination of cocaine and alcohol.
• 45 percent of assailants were described as using alcohol, drugs, or both daily to the point of intoxication during the past month.
• 9 percent of assailants were either in treatment or had previously received treatment for substance abuse.
• 89 percent of victims were repeat victims of current assailants.
• 67 percent of assailants were on probation or parole at the time of assault.
• 72 percent of victims were female;
percent of assailants were male.

- 42 percent of victims used alcohol or drugs the day of the assault — 15 percent had used cocaine; about one half using cocaine reported being forced to by the assailant.

- 68 percent of the assault episodes included use of a weapon, primarily blunt instruments such as hammers, baseball bats, etc.
- 85 percent of the assaults were witnessed by children under the age of 18.
- 15 percent of the victims in the survey were younger than 18 years and most were assaulted after witnessing assaults on their mother.

Batterers’ Services

In July 1998, NIJ published a research brief titled Batterer Programs: What Criminal Justice Agencies Need to Know (Healey & Smith). The highlights of the brief provide this information:

Batterer intervention programs were originally established in the late 1970s as feminists and others called attention to the victimization of women through domestic violence, grassroots programs sprang up, and service providers recognized that the offenders' behavior needed to be addressed. The requirement that batterers attend intervention programs as a condition of probation or as part of pretrial or diversion is fast becoming a part of the response to domestic violence in many jurisdictions. However, judges and probation officers often lack basic information about program goals and methods. This report, a summary of the full-length study, attempts to meet that need by presenting information about batterer intervention programs operating throughout the country. The interventions described were selected to represent the range of programming available and include the established or “mainstream” programs as well as innovative approaches.

All programs are structurally similar, proceeding from intake through assessment, victim contact, group treatment, and completion; but each program is based on one of several theoretical approaches to domestic violence. Most of the pioneers in intervention use the feminist model, which attributes the problem to societal values that legitimate male control. This model, exemplified in the “Duluth Curriculum,” uses education and skills building to re-socialize batterers. The less common family systems interventions, based on the notion that violent behavior stems from dysfunctional family interactions, emphasize building communication skills within the family. Psychotherapeutic and cognitive-behavioral interventions are based on the belief that domestic violence is related to the offender’s psychological problems and, as a result, emphasize therapy and counseling. The EMERGE and AMEND models represent a blend of the feminist educational approach with more in-depth and intensive group work. Increased awareness of the diversity of the batterer population has given rise to the belief that more specialized approaches are needed. One trend reflects the idea that interventions should be based on various typologies or categories of batterers. Of these, the typologies that group offenders by their psychological factors may be less useful for criminal justice purposes than those that do so by degree of risk for dropping out or re-offending. Other specialized approaches are designed to enhance program retention of specific populations based on sociocultural characteristics such as poverty, race, ethnicity, nationality, gender, or sexual orientation.

Batterer intervention programs cannot deter domestic violence unless they are supported by the criminal justice system. Criminal justice responses to domestic violence should be coordinated to support batterer intervention. For example, the integrated criminal justice responses studied for this report included coordination among agencies; use of victim advocates throughout the system; designation of special, dedicated batterer intervention units; and provision of training for agency personnel. Probation officers have a key role as the critical link between the justice system and batterer interventions.

Victims’ Perspective

Another NIJ study (Keilitz et. al., 1998), Civil Protection Orders: Victims’ Views on Effectiveness, indicated the following:

- Effectiveness depends on how specific and comprehensive the orders are and how well they are enforced.
- Victims indicated that effectiveness depended on how accessible the courts are for victims and how well-established the links are between public and private services and support resources for victims.
- Violations of the protection order increase and reported effectiveness decreases as the criminal record of the abuser becomes more serious.
- Victims reported that the orders protected them against repeated incidents of physical and psychological abuse and were valuable in helping them regain a sense of well-being.
- The study confirmed a strong correlation between the severity and duration of abuse — the longer women experience abuse, the more intense the behavior is likely to become and the more likely women are to be severely injured by their abusers.

Recent Legislation

The following legislation, which became effective in Illinois on Jan. 1, 1999, enhances the criminal justice system’s ability to respond to and deter further family violence:

- First Degree Murder: Amends the Criminal Code to state that a defendant, who is at least 18 years of age and who is guilty of first degree murder, is eligible for the death penalty when the victim had an order of protection against the defendant.

- Domestic Battery and Violation of Order of Protection: Enhances a domestic battery and violation of order of protection charge from a Class A misdemeanor to a Class 4 felony if the defendant has a prior conviction for domestic battery or violation of order of protection.

- Insurance: Forbids a company issuing property or casualty insurance from using the fact that an applicant incurred bodily harm as the result of domestic violence as the sole reason for a rating, underwriting, or claims handling decision.

- Elder Abuse: Amends the Elder Abuse and Neglect Act to include a requirement that certain individuals report suspected elder abuse or neglect when it is believed that the elder is unable to seek help on his or her own.

Best Practices

The previously mentioned NIJ studies suggest the following:

- Screen and/or test assailants at the time of arrest for alcohol or drug intoxication.

- Detoxify arrested drug- or alcohol-dependent assailants prior to release from jail.

- Assess children who directly witness domestic violence to determine if services are needed.

- Allow domestic violence assault victims to swear out arrest warrants at the assault scene.

- Provide services for women whose self-esteem has been eroded by the manipulative and coercive behavior of a batterer.

- Safety planning must begin at the earliest point of contact with the victim and continue throughout the process.

- Accurate and complete information about the defendant (including previous arrests, substance abuse history, involvement with child protective services, and experience with batterer intervention) should be used to assist in making decisions concerning plea bargains, bail, and supervision and in fashioning the protection order.

- Reduce time between arrest and intervention program enrollment for batterers.

- Track participants more efficiently — practices currently involve referrals to a wide array of services.

- Centralized dockets created to handle domestic violence cases result in increased expertise, and access to all criminal justice system players and services.

- Opportunities for coordination by the criminal justice system include integrating batterer intervention with court-ordered substance abuse treatment.
• Program and sentencing options are needed for the full range of batterers, not just the low-risk male heterosexuals (the most common category).

• Further research is needed on the interactive aspects of domestic violence, such as use of criminal history information in crafting orders and counseling victims; effects and enforcement of specific terms of protection orders; and actions of police and prosecutors.
Domestic violence and substance abuse increase the risk of child abuse and neglect. Either problem alone has the potential to destroy families; but when the two are combined, this potential increases significantly.

Domestic Violence and Child Maltreatment

Ninety-five percent of serious domestic violence is committed by men against women. These same men are also at high risk of physically abusing their children. Research has shown that children in homes where domestic violence occurs are at risk of becoming victims of violence themselves:

- Children whose mothers are battered are physically abused or neglected at a rate 15 times higher than the national average.

- Women and children are often victims of the same batterer. Studies have found that over half of the children of battered women have been physically or sexually abused by the same perpetrator as their battered mothers. Research on abused children similarly shows that nearly half of them have mothers who are battered.

- Lenore Walker’s study of battered women found that one quarter had abused or neglected their children when they were being abused themselves. The same study also found that battered women were eight times more likely to hurt their children when they were being battered themselves than when they were living safe from violence.

- Even if they are not intentionally targeted for abuse, children in homes where women are being battered are sometimes injured while trying to intervene on behalf of their mothers, or when they are nearby while objects are thrown. Young children are sometimes hurt when their mothers are attacked while holding them.

- Because domestic violence is a pattern of behavior which escalates over time, it becomes increasingly likely that child witnesses of battering will eventually become victims of the same perpetrator.

- Domestic violence is the single major precursor to deaths occurring as the result of child maltreatment.

Even when children of battered women are not physically abused themselves, they still suffer the traumatic effects of witnessing violence between their parents or caretakers. Whether or not they experience any physical abuse, children from violent homes are at risk for problems of adjustment:

- Children who witness domestic violence suffer effects similar to children who are themselves physically or sexually abused.

- The emotional effects of domestic violence on children include taking responsibility for the abuse, constant anxiety, guilt for not being able to stop the abuse, fear of abandonment, and lack of confidence.
• Children from violent homes may experience cognitive or language problems, developmental delay, stress-related physical ailments, and hearing and speech problems.

• Stress-related symptoms such as bed-wetting, hair pulling, frequent nightmares or night terrors are often present in children of battered women.

• Some children cope through regressive symptoms such as thumb-sucking or infantile temper tantrums.

• Even infants can be visibly upset by arguments between their parents.

In addition to these negative effects, children of battered women also experience the effects of having violent role models. They learn that violence is an appropriate way to manage stress, one that has few consequences from society:

• Many children begin to act out the violence they have seen at home. A study found that 47 percent of boys and 36 percent of girls from violent homes fell within the clinical range of behavior problems. Even when they are not physically abused themselves, child witnesses of domestic violence still show higher levels of behavior problems than children living in safe homes.

• Research shows that children from violent homes are more likely than other children to be abusive toward brothers and sisters.

• When tested, children from violent homes were more likely than their peers from nonviolent homes to indicate that violence is an acceptable way to resolve conflicts or express anger.

This modeling of violence continues into adulthood, and many children of battered women become batterers or victims themselves. Boys from violent homes are 15 times more likely than boys from non-violent homes to become abusers themselves. Research found that witnessing spouse abuse as a child was an even better predictor for becoming an abuser than experiencing physical abuse as a child. In this way, the cycle of violence continues.

Substance Abuse and Child Maltreatment

Substance abuse is closely linked to child abuse. At least 40 percent of child maltreatment cases involve the use of alcohol or other drugs, and that percentage could be as high as 75 percent. Studies suggest that at least 10 million children live in homes where the primary caretaker is addicted to alcohol or other drugs, and up to 675,000 children per year suffer serious abuse or neglect as the result of that substance abuse.

• Among psychoactive drugs, methamphetamine, cocaine, and PCP are only three of the substances that are capable of increasing the risk for violence due to drug-related irritability, hostility, suspiciousness, and psychosis.

• Alcohol, barbiturates, tranquilizers, and other sedatives, due to their disinhibiting effects, also increase the risk for aggressiveness and violence.

• Opiate use (e.g., heroin) may contribute to child neglect, while withdrawal from opiates is more likely to increase the risk for abuse.

• The communities in which addicted women live with their children may also be a source of traumatic violence. In Illinois, some clients report that they live in what they perceive as a “war zone,” and may resort to sleeping with their children on the floor of their home in order to avoid stray bullets from drive-by shootings.

Whether or not they are physically abused, children of substance abusers experience the effects of the chronic stress of living with an addicted parent. Young children of substance abusers may believe they caused the addiction, and older children may feel anxiety and guilt for not being able to control or cure it. Like children of batterers, children of substance abusers often grow up to repeat the pattern, becoming substance abusers themselves.

Safety and Sobriety

A common assumption within substance abuse treatment programs is that if the offending parent’s alcohol or other drug use ceases, so will child maltreatment. This assumption, however, is based on the mistaken belief that the child abuse or neglect is entirely a product of substance abuse.

• Child neglect appears to decrease when an addicted parent or caregiver achieves and maintains sobriety. In some cases, child neglect is directly related to the effects of alcohol and other drugs and to the addict lifestyle, which is often chaotic and unpredictable.

• Child abuse seems to decline minimally, if at all with sobriety. The parent’s sobriety can not be taken as an indication that all child maltreatment will stop.

• A personal history of child abuse is also a risk factor for continued or renewed substance abuse as a means of “self-medicating” the feelings associated with such trauma. Of adults in substance abuse treatment, nearly 70 percent of women and 12 percent of men were sexually abused as children. Substance abuse may often serve as the “anesthetic” which numbs the pain of being an adult survivor of child abuse. When this anesthetic action ceases as the result of sobriety, the individual’s pain may be magnified, increasing the risk of child abuse. For this reason, therapy or counseling outside the realm of chemical dependency treatment may be required in order to minimize the risk of continued child abuse.

Ethics

The identified client within both domestic violence and substance treatment programs is the adult. However, such programs must take into account the importance of ensuring the safety of children within a home in which substance abuse or domestic violence is occurring.

• Both substance abuse and domestic violence intervention programs are mandated to report child abuse and/or neglect. Children from homes in which domestic violence has occurred should receive a thorough physical and psychological assessment.

• When appropriate, these children should be referred to a specialized support group such as those commonly found in domestic violence programs.
Training and Certification

At present, no agency within Illinois provides specific certification for domestic violence or child welfare professionals, although licensure for child welfare workers is likely to become a reality by the end of 2000. The Illinois Alcohol and Other Drug Abuse Professionals Certification Association (IAODAPCA) provides a wide range of certificates and levels of certification for substance abuse counselors, preventionists, assessment and referral specialists, and MISA (mentally-ill substance abuse) workers. Currently, training in the areas of domestic violence and child welfare are not requirements for such certification.

• Currently, the best solution to the issue of dual certification appears to be to continue offering cross-training opportunities to various professions, and to encourage continued dialogue and service planning between the various fields.

• Individuals who are chemically dependent, as well as those who are victims of domestic violence and child maltreatment, are frequently seen in hospital emergency departments and physicians’ offices. Doctors, nurses, and social workers should be targeted for training in the screening of patients for substance abuse, domestic violence and child maltreatment.

• Colleges and universities should be encouraged to seek out opportunities for students majoring in human service fields to learn skills and gain experience in such diverse fields as addiction counseling, domestic violence intervention, and child welfare.
Multicultural Sensitivity

Culture has been defined as “the shared values, norms, traditions, customs, art, history, folklore, and institutions of a group of people.” It is formed by race, ethnicity, age, gender, sexual orientation, and geographical location. Culture shapes an individual’s view of the world, their values, behavior, and way of life. It influences attitudes and affects how an individual responds to domestic violence and substance abuse services.

Culturally competent programs demonstrate sensitivity to and understanding of cultural differences. A culturally competent program:

- Understands the role of culture in shaping behaviors, values and institutions.
- Recognizes that cultural differences exist and have an impact on service delivery.
- Recognizes that diversity exists among the same racial and ethnic groups.
- Respects the unique, culturally defined needs of various client populations.
- Understands that people from different racial and ethnic groups and other cultural subgroups are usually best served by persons who are a part of or in tune with their culture.
- Trains staff to recognize and confront their own prejudices.
- Trains staff to assess and respond to an individual’s communication style — for example, their preferred personal space, eye contact, language style, and the degree to which touching is appropriate.
- Provides written material in the appropriate language.
- Develops linkages with support systems representing the client’s culture.

Ethnic and Racial Populations

Here are some points to consider in providing culturally competent services.

African American Women

- Some women may avoid maintaining eye contact because it is perceived as challenging. Others may reject deferential behavior and may be perceived as disrespectful or hostile. Assess the individual’s communication style and avoid judging behavioral clues.
- Touching during conversations is generally reserved for close friends and family. Touching by a counselor may by considered intrusive or insincere.
- Questions of a personal nature, such as those related to sexual behavior, may be viewed as intrusive and indicative of stereotypical thinking. Staff should be aware that it may take some time before a person is willing to share personal information.
- Some women may be reluctant to report violence because of their community’s negative experience with the police.

Asian/Pacific Island Women

- Be aware of and respect the diversity among the multiple racial and ethnic groups that comprise the Asian/Pacific community. There are more than 60 Asian/Pacific Islander groups, each with their own culture, language and ethnic identities.
• Various Asian/Pacific Islander groups have traditions for physical and emotional healing such as herbs or acupuncture that may be beneficial in treatment.

• Concepts of mental health or psychological well-being may be alien to cultures that assign identity and worth to harmonious relationships.

• Women may deflect eye contact as a sign of respect. Staring is considered impolite.

Hispanic/Latina Women

• Various Hispanic/Latina groups have their own traditions and cultures. It cannot be assumed that one approach will fit all.

• Recognize the importance of family in Hispanic/Latina culture. Be aware that the concept of family is broader than parents and children, and generally includes blood relatives, relatives by marriage, close family friends, and neighbors. When abuse exists, women may be reluctant to leave because of commitment to the family and fear of isolation.

Native American Women

• The Native American population consists of approximately 450 different groups with varying customs and some 250 languages. Acknowledgment of the cultural and religious beliefs, values and practices can empower and validate the Native American woman.

• Native American women owe their allegiance to their tribal laws over federal or state laws. Awareness of the Tribal Council’s laws is helpful, particularly in counseling domestic violence victims.

• Native American women may experience feelings of isolation when living apart from the reservation. These feelings can be minimized by helping her build an adequate support system.

Immigrant Women

• Immigrant women are often vulnerable to domestic violence because of their immigration status and economic dependency. They may also be isolated because of language barriers and may face the added burden of racism.

• Immigrant women may not know American laws or may be misinformed by their batterer. The batterer may use the threat of deportation to control the woman. The Violence Against Women Act allows an immigrant woman to petition for legal residence. The provisions of the law are complicated, and professional assistance is recommended. Contact the Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence or the Poverty Law Center for assistance.

Men of Color

In groups composed primarily of European Americans, men of color may feel:

• Isolated — detached from familiar surroundings, culture, institutions and people.

• Uprooted — lacking familiarity with the system, dealing with hostility and messages of inferiority from the majority culture.

• Helpless — not functioning fully because of language barriers, lack of support systems, lack of education and skills.
• Powerless — lacking political and economic power, vulnerable because of immigration status and/or lack of documentation.

Studies have shown that men of color progress faster in treatment groups where they are the majority.

In partner abuse groups it is important to consider:

• Some men of color may argue that the society which disenfranchises them gives disproportionate power to women over men.

• The provider should be aware of the distinction between acknowledgment and collusion and take care to avoid the kind of negative bonding which can allow the man to internalize the message that his experiences justify his violence against women.
Special Populations:
Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgendered People

Addiction and the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, or Transgendered Individual

Research on alcohol and drug addiction in the gay, lesbian, bisexual, or transgendered (LGBT) community is limited by a number of factors. Early research tended to concentrate on samples drawn from almost exclusively male patients of psychoanalysts and psychotherapists. The focus of the studies was often directed less toward treatment of alcoholism or addiction than toward “curing” homosexuality. Subsequent studies have focused on samples of people who are identified as gay because they are patrons of gay bars. The fact that in each of these groups rates of drug and alcohol use tended to be higher for what should have been obvious reasons skewed the resulting data. The rate of drug and alcohol abuse and addiction (often reaching 30 percent or higher) hypothesized in these samples was projected as a reasonable estimate for the population as a whole. There has been little research that recognizes the fact that most gay men and lesbians do not publicly acknowledge their orientation and are consequently overlooked in many studies.

One of the factors complicating the recognition and treatment of addiction in the LGBT community is the fact that bars do tend to be social centers in the community. For people who may be subject to hostility, violence, or arrest for making incorrect guesses or assumptions about another person’s orientation, it is important to have a place where LGBT identity can safely be assumed. That place has usually been the gay and/or lesbian bar. In larger communities, this is less true now than it may have been previously, but it is still the case for many LGBT people. In some locales such venues are the only places where LGBT people can be relatively free of harassment and ridicule, and in a few states even these havens are subject to law enforcement and regulatory discrimination. It may be true for some people that the only gay men or lesbians they know are people whom they have met in gay or lesbian bars.

On the whole, people in the LGBT community are wary of mental health and substance abuse treatment because of the homophobic assumptions and practices which have been characteristic in the past (and which continue to be a problem in some institutions). Moreover, the “peer group” from whom LGBT people must seek support in treatment and in 12-Step and other self-help groups may reflect the generally homophobic attitudes of the larger culture, and may pose problems for the gay man or lesbian who is seeking sobriety. The encouragement of self-acceptance, which generally characterizes addiction treatment, has often hit a snag when a client discloses same-sex sexual attraction.

While the incidence of LGBT alcoholism and addiction may have been overstated, there is certainly little reason to believe that overall rates of addiction and substance abuse in the LGBT community are any lower than in the general community. Other research has shown that “sociocultural factors influence whether, how much, and why a person drinks” (National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, 1978). Even assuming a similar distribution in the LGBT community of whatever factors may predispose people to addiction for genetic or biological reasons, the use of drugs and alcohol to medicate negative feeling states resulting from homophobia (both external and internalized) is likely to be higher in this population. Thus, those with such predisposing factors will be more likely to show symptoms of the disease, and to do so earlier.

Homophobia, Misogyny and Violence

Rigid conceptions of gender roles and attributes play a significant part in the dynamics of domestic violence. The expectation of male privilege is grounded in a belief that men are superior to women and that men have rights with regard to women which are not reciprocal. One of the effects of this attitude is to make male identity, and specifically heterosexual male identity, the norm. To be anything else is to be “less than.”

In a sexist society it is not surprising that boys who find themselves attracted to other males, and wish the attraction reciprocated, may begin to internalize the gender role expectations that surround them and assume characteristics that the social framework characterizes as “feminine.” Similarly, girls who are attracted to women may take on characteristics that might be seen as “masculine.” Misogyny’s relationship to homophobia can be inferred from the fact that adults see a girl who is considered a tomboy as “cute” far longer than they do a boy who is considered a sissy.

The threat to male privilege implied by homosexuality is that gender roles and their attendant privileges are not immutable — if he can give his up, perhaps mine can be taken away. If, as a man, I view women as sex objects in ways that depersonalize them, I am likely to respond with anger and fear to the thought that another man might regard me in the same way. If, as a man, I am defensive of male privilege, I may well feel threatened when confronted by another man who appears to have voluntarily surrendered that privilege. If I believe that being the object of a man’s sexual interest is one of the things that defines the female and makes her “less than,” then the attention of such a man is even more threatening to me.

Lesbians get less attention from the heterosexist position. The sexual attraction of one woman for another becomes useful in providing a label for women who reject or are indifferent to a particular man’s advances. Whereas male-male sex is seen as repulsive and shameful, female-female sexual activity is seen as titillating or merely strange. Thus lesbians tend to become less visible, and are discounted by being trivialized (Nelson, 1988).

Homophobia and Men Who Batter

In many kinds of behavioral intervention or therapy with men, it is necessary to address homophobia as an isolating factor. Men in substance abuse treatment, for example, often need to confront homophobia as a factor that makes it more difficult for them to self-disclose in groups of men or to confide fully in a sponsor. Many men come to realize that homophobia has made it difficult for them to seek and appreciate support from other men, including fathers and male siblings. In intervention with men who batter, however, homophobia and its relationship to misogyny play a more crucial role, and confrontation of homophobia is often a difficult and volatile aspect of the intervention process.

LGBT People of Color

Lesbians, gay men and transgendered individuals who are people of color experience what has been called “double trouble”: they must deal with the effects not only of racism, but also of homophobia. For lesbians of color, this becomes a triple threat, as the effects of sexism must also be considered. People of color must deal with racism in the gay and lesbian community, whose emerging culture is heavily dominated by White men and women. At the same time, in struggling against racism, they must deal with the fear of homophobic retaliation in addition to their other vulnerabilities. These factors increase the isolation of the lesbian of color particularly, but also of the gay or transgendered person of color. The person of color who embraces a lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgendered identity is subject not only to homophobic attack, as are Whites, but also to racist attacks, which are not a concern for Whites (Kanuha, 1990).

Violence in Gay and Lesbian Relationships

There is evidence that battering occurs in gay and lesbian domestic partnerships at roughly the same rate as in heterosexual marriages or domestic relationships. One of the first studies of domestic violence in lesbian relationships found that 25 percent of those surveyed reported abuse in their committed relationships (Brand & Kidd). A 1990 study determined that 47 percent of lesbian couples had experienced repeated acts of violence. Of these couples, 10 percent to 20 percent experienced severe violence, defined as: two or more incidents of physical violence, including beating, choking, hitting, forced sex, mutilation or threats with a weapon (Coleman, 1990).

What we know about same-gender relationship violence is limited. According to a fact sheet distributed by Wingspan Domestic Violence Project in Tucson, this is because:

- Same-gender relationships are often not considered to be viable partnerships or families.
- In many states (Illinois is an exception), domestic violence law only protects partners of the opposite sex. Other types of domestic violence legislation, such as mandatory arrest, no-drop clauses, state prosecution and mandates for abusers or victims to attend programs that address domestic violence, may not apply to same-gender relationships.
- Fear of continued victimization by law enforcement, criminal justice, and social service helpers keeps LGBT people from seeking assistance, support, and safety.
- Limited official programs and resources further isolate same-gender couples in domestic violence situations.
• Many LGBT people lead double lives in which it would be a threat to job, status, family role, safety, and security to be open about their sexual or gender identity. When help is needed, fear of exposure may prevent them from taking action to stop the cycle of violence.

• With a few exceptions, the LGBT community generally avoids, denies, and ignores relationship violence. Victims and perpetrators are left without resources within their identified communities.

Intervention

Few resources are available for intervention in violent LGBT relationships. It is obvious that gay men would not be safe in an intervention group that was predominantly composed of heterosexual men. Of course, no woman should be included in a group for men who batter. In many communities, this makes group treatment of gay and lesbian batterers impossible, because it is unlikely that a sufficient number of gay men or lesbians to form an effective group would present for intervention at any one time.

In Chicago, the largest social service agency that serves the lesbian and gay community is currently referring identified perpetrators to individual therapy with selected psychotherapists. This is certainly not recognized as the intervention of choice. At present, there is only one support group for lesbian victims of domestic violence operating in Chicago. There are no groups that offer similar support to gay male victims. There are no services that specifically address the needs of transgendered people.

Special concerns

Concerns specific to LGBT identity also reduce the willingness of people affected by the problem to seek help. Anecdotal evidence is strong that such services, if they existed, would be used by only a small fraction of the LGBT community. Barriers to greater participation include the following:

• Feats of being “outed” or exposed as homosexual. In Illinois, except in Cook County and the cities of Champaign and Urbana, a gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgendered person can be discharged from or refused employment, evicted from or refused housing, and denied any public accommodation simply because of the person’s sexual orientation. In fact, such discrimination is also legal on the basis of perceived or suspected orientation.

• Low expectations of official response. Many LGBT persons have experienced insults, harassment, and ridicule from police and other governmental authorities, and do not expect serious attention to their needs, including their needs for protection from violence. Many fear that taking action will result in retaliation by the perpetrator that will go unhindered by any official sanction.

• Fear of other homophobic or heterosexist responses. Both battered gay men and lesbians who batter challenge the assumptions that underlie the provision of services to both victims and perpetrators. Internalized homophobia leads many in the LGBT community to deny or minimize the existence of the problem, and disbelief, ridicule or rationalization often greets discussion of the problem.

Initial Steps

While there are no easy solutions to this complex group of problems, there are steps communities and institutions can begin to take.

- Name the problem. Community groups, publications, and institutions within the LGBT community must acknowledge that gay men, lesbians, bisexuals and transgendered people batter their partners.

- Make a commitment to a response. Complex problems such as the incidence of violence in same-gender relationships often lead to situations in which nothing is done because so much needs to be done. An individual, a single community, or one institution cannot provide all that is necessary to address this, but each can do something. Programs can examine their attitudes toward LGBT clients, and can provide training designed to make staff sensitive to the particular needs of this community and its members. Community organizations and networks that have done so much to begin a coordinated response to intimate partner violence in opposite-sex couples can examine the opportunities for outreach to LGBT people.

- Encourage research. While there are few resources nationwide for this community, there are some. Further research is clearly needed to better understand the dynamics of same-sex domestic violence and the particular challenges it poses to intervention and safety planning efforts.

Within programs, there are steps that counselors and advocates can take to increase the effectiveness of their interactions with LGBT clients.

- Service providers should be aware that there is not one monolithic “gay subculture” or “gay lifestyle.”

- As with any special population, an effort to be culturally sensitive begins with awareness of one’s own attitudes. Advocates and counselors may wish to ask themselves:

  (a) Can I personally believe that gay is just as good as straight?

  (b) Can I personally conceive of a homosexual person living a happy life?

  (c) Do I conceal from myself attitudes of pity, condescension, and moral superiority toward LGBT people, attitudes which may cut me off from full communication with LGBT clients? (Schwartz, 1980).

- Become familiar with the resources available to LGBT clients in your community. For example, in Chicago, many LGBT persons may be unaware that more than 60 gay/lesbian or gay/lesbian-friendly religious organizations have services on a weekly or more frequent basis (Out! A Resource Guide, 1998). Many LGBT organizations for civic, political, philanthropic, and community organizing activities exist, which are places to seek friendship and support among people who are not focused on drinking. Many smaller communities may have some resources for LGBT clients of which the clients are unaware.
• Become familiar with referral sources for treatment such as the Pride Institute, Horizons Community Services and the Howard Brown Health Center, which may be able to suggest additional local resources. Obtain copies of the Pink Pages or Out, which are LGBT “yellow pages” publications issued on a semiannual basis.

• Be aware that there is a growing network of sobriety-based support for LGBT people such as special-interest A.A. and N.A. groups.

Various Alcohol and Other Drug Screening Questions ²

¹ A score of 4 or more suggests evaluation by an AOD professional
² These are questions recommended by Dr. Kevin Downey, TASC
The following are examples of questions that batterers’ programs may choose to utilize in their screening, depending on experience, type of batterers in the program, or characteristics of the man presenting for evaluation. Questions in bold type have been identified by men recovering from drug or alcohol problems as questions that are particularly important.

- Has a physician ever suggested that you quit or cut down on your drinking?
- Has anyone in your family or close to you ever expressed concern about your drinking or drug use?
- Have you ever missed school events for your children?
- Has any member of your family ever had a problem with drugs or alcohol?
- Has anyone ever told you that when you drink or use drugs, you are a different person?
- Have you ever been unable to remember parts of the night before when you were drinking?
- Have you ever done things to get alcohol or drugs that made you feel ashamed?
- Have you tried to quit or cut down on alcohol on your own?
- Have you ever been using more drugs or alcohol than normal?
- Have you ever thought about getting help or going into treatment?
- Have you ever gone to counseling or self help (AA, etc.) to help with drinking?
- Has your use of alcohol or drugs ever gotten you into trouble?
- Have you ever gotten into a fight while using?
- Are you a normal drinker?
- What is the most you have ever drank or used in a 24-hour period?
- Do drugs or alcohol make you feel better?
- Do you ever wish that you didn’t use alcohol or drugs?
- How long have you been using drugs?
- How old were you when you got high or intoxicated on drugs or alcohol for the first time?
- Have you ever had a DUI?
- Do you like to drink before a party to relax or get ready?
- Do you look forward to certain times of the day because you know you can drink or use drugs?
Directions: The questions that follow are about your use of alcohol and other drugs. Your answers will be kept private. Mark response that best fits for you. Answer the questions in terms of your experiences in the past 6 months.

During the last 6 months:

1. Have you used alcohol or other drugs? (Such as wine, beer, hard liquor, pot, coke, heroin or other opiates, uppers, downers, hallucinogens, or inhalants.)
   _____ Yes            _____ No

2. Have you felt that you use too much alcohol or other drugs?
   _____ Yes             _____ No

3. Have you tried to cut down or quit drinking or using alcohol or other drugs?
   _____ Yes             _____ No

4. Have you gone to anyone for help because of your drinking or drug use? (Such as Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous, Cocaine Anonymous, counselors or a treatment program.)
   _____ Yes             _____ No

5. Have you had any health problems? For example, have you:
   _____ Had blackouts or other periods of memory loss?
   _____ Injured your head after drinking or using drugs?
   _____ Had convulsions, delirium tremens (“DTs”)?
   _____ Had hepatitis or other liver problems?
   _____ Felt sick, shaky, or depressed when you stopped?
   _____ Felt “coke bugs” or a crawling feeling under the skin after you stopped using drugs?
   _____ Been injured after drinking or using?
   _____ Used needles to shoot drugs?

6. Has drinking or other drug use caused problems between you and your family or friends?
   _____ Yes             _____ No

7. Has your drinking or other drug use caused problems at school or work?
   _____ Yes             _____ No

8. Have you been arrested or had other legal problems? (Such as bounced bad checks, driving while intoxicated, theft, or drug possession.)
   _____ Yes             _____ No

9. Have you lost your temper or gotten into arguments or fights while drinking or using other drugs?
   _____ Yes             _____ No

10. Are you needing to drink or use drugs more and more to get the effect you want?
    _____ Yes             _____ No

11. Do you spend a lot of time thinking about or trying to get alcohol or other drugs?

Total score: ______  Score range: 0-14

Preliminary interpretation of responses:

Score  Degree of Risk for AOD Abuse
0-1................................. None to low
2-3................................. Minimal
>4................................. Moderate
CAGE-AID QUESTIONS

1. Have you ever felt you ought to cut down or stop drinking or using drugs?

2. Has anyone annoyed you or gotten on your nerves by telling you to cut down or stop drinking or using drugs?

3. Have you felt guilty or bad about how much you drink or use?

4. Have you been waking up wanting to have an alcoholic drink or use drugs?

4 Any positive response to a CAGE-AID indicates a possible problem and suggests further evaluation by an AOD professional.
GENERAL GUIDELINES FOR IDENTIFYING CLIENTS WHO MAY BE AFFECTED BY ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUG USE

• LOOK FOR CHANGE IN BEHAVIOR, ATTITUDE, OR APPEARANCE

• IDENTIFY BEHAVIOR WHICH DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT
  - Client can not stay awake
  - Client unable to sit still
  - Client is disoriented or confused for no apparent reason
  - Client laughs or cries at inappropriate time
  - Rapid shift in client’s mood
  - Client’s speech is slurred
  - Client’s speech is rapid and loud, and it is difficult to follow his/her train of thought

• DO NOT AUTOMATICALLY ASSUME BEHAVIOR IS CAUSED BY ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUG USE. RULE OUT OTHER CAUSES FIRST
  - Client is physically ill (e.g., flu)
  - Client is upset about some obvious problem (e.g., has been victimized by sexual partner or other person; client is concerned about her son’s gang involvement)
  - Client’s physician has recently prescribed new medication, particularly for psychiatric reasons

• DO NOT ARGUE WITH THE CLIENT REGARDING HIS/HER USE OF ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUGS

Murray Straus, Ph.D.

During the last year, how many times has the person from whom you seek protection been physically abusive with you? Circle the "x" if he has done this prior to the past year. For example, if he had slapped you once six months ago, but not before that, you would circle "1" for that item. If he slapped you two years ago, but not in the last year, you would circle "x". If he has slapped you two years ago and six months ago, you circle both "1" and "x".

Power and Control Wheel

PHYSICAL VIOLENCE SEXUAL

USING COERCION AND THREATS
Making and/or carrying out threats to do something to hurt her:
• threatening to leave her, to commit suicide, to report her to welfare • making her do illegal things.

USING ECONOMIC ABUSE
Preventing her from getting or keeping a job • making her ask for money • giving her an allowance • taking her money • not letting her know about or have access to family income.

USING MALE PRIVILEGE
Treating her like a servant • making all the big decisions • acting like the "master of the castle" • being the one to define men’s and women’s roles.

USING CHILDREN
Making her feel guilty about the children • using the children to relay messages • using the children to harass her • threatening to take the children away.

USING ISOLATION
Controlling what she does, who she sees and talks to, what she eats, where she goes • limiting her outside involvement • using jealousy to justify actions.

USING INTIMIDATION
Making her afraid by using looks, actions, gestures • smashed things • destroying her property • abusing pets • displaying weapons.

USING EMOTIONAL ABUSE
Putting her down • making her feel bad about herself • calling her names • making her think she’s crazy • playing mind games • humiliating her • making her feel guilty.

USING MINIMIZING, DENYING AND BLAMING
Making light of the abuse and not taking her concerns about it seriously • saying the abuse didn’t happen • shifting responsibility for abusive behavior • saying she caused it.
A Power and Control Model for Women's Substance Abuse

POWER AND CONTROL

Cycle of Violence

Phase 1
Increased tension, anger, blaming and arguing.

Phase 2
Battering—hitting, slapping, kicking, choking, use of objects or weapons. Sexual abuse. Verbal threats and abuse.

Phase 3
Calm Stage (this stage may decrease over time). Man may deny violence, say he was drunk, say he's sorry and promise it will never happen again.
Manifestations of Violence

Abuse can occur in different forms. It can be physical, emotional, sexual, spiritual, social and/or economic. The lists below describe some of the tactics of abuse batterers use as they attempt to gain or maintain power and control over their intimate partners. Abuse does not always progress in regular steps as shown here. Sometimes the abuse may advance from pushing or hitting directly to more severe physical violence such as use of weapons. Although each relationship is unique, any type of abuse must be considered a serious cause for concern. Despite different circumstances, it is important to remember abuse can escalate (especially if intervention fails to occur). A coordinated community response holding batterers accountable for these abusive behaviors is essential as is a response acknowledging and respecting the rights of DV victims. Exercise: It is helpful for people to be aware of the tactics of domestic violence. Circle the type(s) of abuse you are now experiencing (or have experienced in the past). Notice if the violence is increasing in intensity, severity or frequency. Talk to a domestic violence advocate to develop or review your current safety plan or explore your options. Remember, domestic violence directed at you is never your fault (even if you were drinking or using drugs).

Emotional Abuse

- insulting jokes
- ignore feelings
- jealousy
- isolation
- humiliation
- harming pets
- calls you ‘crazy’, ‘drunk’, or ‘junkie’
- silent treatment
- insults blaming/
- monitoring accusations
- threats activities
- degradation
- homicide/suicide

Physical Abuse

- scratch
- slap
- push
- hit
- target hit
- kick
- choke
- beat
- weapon
- murder
- use
- deny physical needs
- bite
- force
- punch
- throw
- burn
- sleep
- objects
- poison

This notice accompanies a disclosure of information concerning a client in alcohol/drug abuse treatment, made to you with the consent of such client. This information has been disclosed to you from records protected by federal confidentiality rules (42 CFR Part 2). The Federal rules prohibit you from making any further disclosure of this information unless further disclosure is expressly permitted by the written consent of the person to whom it pertains or as otherwise permitted by 42 CFR Part 2. A general authorization for the release of medical or other information is NOT sufficient for this purpose. The Federal rules restrict any use of the information to criminally investigate or prosecute any alcohol or drug abuse patient.

Sample Mutual Services (Linkage) Agreement
XYZ Addictions Treatment Center

The purpose of this document is to formalize the relationship between XYZ Addictions Treatment Center and the ABC Shelter. This cooperative and reciprocal arrangement will expedite referral, admission, and discharge of clients, allowing both agencies to serve clients better.

XZY Center will provide the following:

- Referrals of clients in need of safety planning, shelter and support
- Assessment services for substance abuse and chemical dependence
  - Level I services for women
    Conventional outpatient services
  - Level II services for women
    Intensive outpatient or partial hospitalization services
  - Level III services for women
    Residential Treatment services
- Non-medical detoxification for women
- Case management services related to substance abuse treatment

ABC Center will provide the following:

- Referrals of clients in need of substance abuse treatment
- Assistance with safety planning for XYZ Center clients
- Shelter on a space-available basis for clients leaving substance abuse treatment who have been identified as victims of domestic violence
- Weekly support group for XYZ clients who have been identified as victims

Both parties to this agreement consent to abide by federal and Illinois standards regarding the confidentiality of client information, and to defend against efforts to obtain that information without the client’s consent. Services will be provided under each party’s usual arrangements for payment and/or funding and this agreement is not a guarantee that treatment slots or shelter beds will be available.
This agreement will become effective on the date both parties sign this agreement and may run uninterrupted for a period of one year from this effective date. Either party may terminate this agreement upon thirty days’ written notice to the other party.
