Thank you for your interest in becoming part of HAVEN’s Survivor Speakers Bureau. This is an opportunity to use your story to help change perceptions about sexual assault and domestic violence. The Survivor Speaker training will allow you to learn how to counter myths and misconceptions, create a dialogue and field questions. You will also learn how to create safety for yourself before, during, and after a speaking engagement.

Enclosed is an application as well as our Speaker Guidelines and Common questions about the Survivor Speakers Bureau. Please review all materials and return the completed application form. Upon review of your application we will contact you to schedule an interview.

I look forward to meeting with you in the near future.

Yours in partnership,

Cristy S. Cardinal

Survivor Speakers Bureau
Speaker Guidelines

The purpose of the Survivor Speakers Bureau is to increase awareness about sexual assault and domestic violence through public speaking and education. We have prepared the following guidelines to assist you:

- We ask that you be at least 18 years old
- We ask that you be able to receive messages from HAVEN on your answering machine regarding the details of a speaking engagement.
- Speaking should not be considered counseling or a substitute for counseling. We ask that you be at a place of healing prior to undertaking public speaking.
- The goal of the Speakers Bureau is to educate the community, not to get even with a perpetrator or to seek revenge or retribution. We ask that you consider your motives before considering public speaking.
- If you are currently struggling with a mental illness or substance abuse problem we ask that you wait to participate until these things become manageable.
- We ask that you not speak if you have been sexually assaulted or sexually abused within the last year.
- We ask that you not speak if you are currently in an abusive relationship or have been in an abusive relationship within the last year.
- Speakers are ultimately responsible for their own health and well being before, during, and after speaking engagements. We ask that you be honest with yourself about your limitations and safety.
- We ask that you not portray yourself as a HAVEN staff or volunteer (unless you have been through the volunteer training or are currently on staff). If any questions about the agency come up please defer them to a staff person or volunteer.
- We ask that you not use the last name of your perpetrator when telling your personal story.

For Non-Offending Loved Ones
- If your loved one is still alive, we ask that you inform them of your intention to take this training and your reason for doing so.

(over)
We ask that if the survivor is opposed to you speaking publicly about the violence that you respect their wishes and not take the training. We ask that you consider another form of volunteerism.

We ask that you establish guidelines with the survivor about what they would like you to share and what should be keep confidential.

We ask that you not use the last name of the perpetrator or survivor even if they give you permission.

We ask that you review the Speaker Guidelines and your completed Speaker Form (which you will receive after completing the training) with the survivor so that they understand the program and can give their input on your choice of speaking engagements.

Thank you for helping us end violence in all its forms.
COMMON QUESTIONS AND CONCERNS FOR SURVIVORS OF VIOLENCE
CONSIDERING PUBLIC SPEAKING

“I want to speak but I’m not sure I’m ready”
There are a variety of ways that you can determine your readiness. Talk to your friends and family as well as the coordinator of the speaker training that you are interested in taking (they should already have the guidelines). Also consider how much time has elapsed since your last incidence of violence. A minimum of one year is necessary (and often times much longer) before considering public speaking. Allow yourself plenty of time to heal before putting yourself in front of an audience.

“I would speak but my perpetrator is out of jail and I am afraid of him. Should I speak or not?”
Always err on the side of caution. If you think speaking publicly could jeopardize your safety or the safety of your friends or family – don’t do it. There are many ways to be an activist that don’t include putting your story out to the public.

“I need to speak because my perpetrator deserves for people to know what he did to me and my family.”
This is not an appropriate reason to speak. In order to be truly effective your main goal must be to educate others. If you go into public speaking to seek revenge or retribution or because you have a lot of anger to work out, your audience will have a hard time connecting with you and the issues you want to address.

“I think speaking would help me heal.”
As a speaker you need to be at a place of healing prior to speaking publicly. There are healing aspects to speaking, but there can be painful parts as well, particularly if you are not fully prepared.

“I want to speak but there are parts of my story that I don’t want to share.”
You have control over what you say during a speaking engagement. You can simply leave out parts of your story (there is no way you could tell your entire story anyway). If you are asked a question you don’t want to answer, simply say that you would prefer not to talk about that piece of your story. There is also information that is not appropriate to share in a speaking engagement. Training and practice will help you make these decisions.
HAVEN Speakers Bureau
Application

The purpose of the HAVEN Speakers Bureau is to train survivors of sexual assault and domestic violence and their non-offending family members to use public speaking as a tool for creating social change. Please thoroughly review the enclosed Speaker Guidelines. Completing the training does not necessarily mean you will be a speaker for HAVEN.
